Security and Compliance Complexity

The security landscape is becoming more complex and threats more pervasive and hostile. Mobility, bring your own device (BYOD), virtualization, multi-cloud, and social media are all vulnerable entry points into an organization and can pose risks if not properly managed.

Most organizations are primarily focused on keeping systems operating at optimum performance, which consumes most of their IT department's resources. Not only do they lack the technology and security expertise to develop and maintain a high security posture, they lack the budget and time required to remain up-to-date on the numerous threats facing their organization.

With growing threats, tight budgets, increased regulatory pressure, and the need for premium security expertise, many organizations are turning to Managed Security Services to bridge the gap, augment IT teams, and provide around-the-clock security monitoring and management.
